Parental Engagement Spotlight
How can we build stronger relationships between schools and families?

Click to Watch the Recording

Webinar Description

This webinar explores the relationship between parents & caregivers with schools.

In this webinar, HundrED, together with Kidsburgh, the Center for Universal Education (CUE) at Brookings, and IDEO discuss the Parental Engagement Spotlight, the challenges this initiative seeks to address, what we hope to achieve, and the benefits of being involved.

Key Takeaways

In case you don’t have time to watch the full recording you can find the highlights here.

- We are looking for innovative solutions working to build stronger family engagement with schools. If you have or know of an innovation - recommend or share your solution before April 15th!
- Most parents desire a “new” type of education for their child that is interactive and social in nature and supports both their socio-emotional and academic development.
- Education decision-makers must get to know the parents in their jurisdiction to build strong family partnerships and navigate change.
- Parents are becoming increasingly engaged and are looking for innovative ways to co-create solutions with schools.

About the Project

HundrED, together with Kidsburgh, the CUE at Brookings, and IDEO seek to bring together innovative collaborators to help identify, share, and facilitate the use of promising new strategies to build stronger school-family and teacher-parent partnerships.

Submit a Solution

If you have a solution currently working to support the engagement of caregivers with their child’s education, submit your solution before April 15th, 2021.

Details

Date:
March, 25th, 2021

Useful Links:
- Register for the Community Conversation
- Submit an Innovation

Speakers

Yu-Ling Cheng
The Ambassador and Marketing Director for Kidsburgh

Larry Corio
Program Director at IDEO overseeing The Teachers Guild x School Retool

Lauren Ziegler
Project Director, Education Innovation at the CUE at the Brookings Institution

Chris Petrie
Head of Global Research at HundrED

#FamilyEngagement
Parental Engagement Spotlight
How can we build stronger relationships between schools and families?

Webinar Description
This webinar explores the relationship between parents & caregivers with schools.

In this webinar, HundrED, together with Kidsburgh, the Center for Universal Education (CUE) at Brookings, and IDEO discuss the Parental Engagement Spotlight, the challenges this initiative seeks to address, what we hope to achieve, and the benefits of being involved.

Key Takeaways
In case you don't have time to watch the full recording you can find the highlights here.

- We are looking for innovative solutions working to build stronger family engagement with schools. If you have or know of an innovation - recommend or share your solution before April 15th!
- Most parents desire a “new” type of education for their child that is interactive and social in nature and supports both their socio-emotional and academic development.
- Education decision-makers must get to know the parents in their jurisdiction to build strong family partnerships and navigate change.
- Parents are becoming increasingly engaged and are looking for innovative ways to co-create solutions with schools.

About the Project
HundrED, together with Kidsburgh, the CUE at Brookings, and IDEO seek to bring together innovative collaborators to help identify, share, and facilitate the use of promising new strategies to build stronger school-family and teacher-parent partnerships.

Submit a Solution
If you have a solution currently working to support the engagement of caregivers with their child’s education, submit your solution before April 15th, 2021.