The experiences of youths through the programs previously described brought about new challenges and learnings relevant to the problems that affect them the most and their causes. In several cases, the initiatives resulting within the framework of these education experiences have been implemented in the local communities making remarkable transformation.

Scholas created Wezum after listening to over 30 thousand youngsters across the world. It’s a youth international observatory aimed at analyzing the deep causes lying behind the main problems affecting teenagers.

Wezum’s primary role is to gather, analyze and disseminate significant information through its platform to develop public policies and social programs, promote commitment of different social stakeholders, and provide data to encourage and favor discussion about ideas taking into account direct and concrete experience from young people from different countries, cultures, religions and socio-economic contexts.
